NYRR Run for the Future

Through the sport of running, NYRR Run for the Future creates opportunities for a diverse group of New York City young women by providing an inclusive environment and the necessary resources to strengthen each young woman's ability and confidence in herself.

Designed for those who have never run before, NYRR Run for the Future is a free seven-week $2,000 scholarship program that teaches 11th grade girls in high school how to run. With support from NYRR's coaching staff, participants are taught running technique, nutrition, and goal setting so they can develop the ability, confidence, and motivation to be active for life. At the conclusion of the program, the new runners participate in their first 5K (3.1-mile) race. Those accepted into NYRR Run for the Future who fulfill the program requirements and maintain an 80% attendance rate will receive a $2,000 college scholarship.
